Some of the Romance of His Life, Various Items of Interest in Luzelle Neighborhood.

Luzelle, Ky.

Editor's Courier:
I have received so many letters of late from people in Fulton, Hickman, Moscow, Cayce, Shuck Switch and other large places, requesting my autograph and insisting on a short sketch of my life that I have concluded just to let some of these facts go into print. So with the Courier's permission, here is where I tell the story of my life. There are 37 chapters and an appendix—I am going to "cut that out."

I was born in the country, near Luzelle, the year of the big wind, which of course, makes me about the age of Catlett Johnson, Bill Perry and S. J. Self. This was the same year the pieplant all froze, following the winter of the blue snow. That same spring the rabbit first made a noise like a turnip, and Dave Morgan invented the saying, "Why does a chicken cross the road?"

Although I was born in Fulton county, no one has ever accused me of being a Rockefeller or a Schlenker. Some one once asked me what I would do if I had Rockefeller's income. I replied: "I don't know, but I have often wondered what Rockefeller or Schlenker would do if they had mine."

Along about this time I was courting a girl with all the emphasis and earnestness of my emphatic and loving disposition. That is I was earnest enough in my own communions, but like Paul Shaw, of State Line, I couldn't get up enough courage to ask the girl. One day, in a fit of desperation, I called her over the telephone.

"Is this you, Mame?"
"Uh, huh," came the answer in sultry tones, slightly jumbled from chewing gum.

"Will you marry me?" I blurted out like a calf coughing sweet milk on the hired man's Sunday shirt front.

"Sure Mike!" responded Mame, without hesitation or embarrassment. "Who are you?"

"This is Deacon."

That night I called and kissed her right on the mouth. My, but that kiss tasted good! Well, it was like—let me see what did that kiss taste like? Well, it was like the distilled essence of honey spread thick on a piece of pumpkin pie (like mother used to make), only about a thousand times more so. It felt like a covey of quail flying out of each ear, and ended with a sensation like a flock of angels pouring pure maple syrup down my back.

Mame didn't scream. She said afterward that she couldn't have screamed if she had wanted to while I was kissing her, and by the time she could scream, she didn't want to. I asked her why she didn't scream for help, and she said she didn't think I needed any.

Well, we were as happy as a pair of young calves chewing each other's ears for the first time. It was a regular lemonade festival—a regular love feast like the Fulton county Democracy enjoyed the day Motters came over to your town and allowed a few of the faithful chosen to kiss the hem of his garments, and called it a convention. Yea, was bliss. She was the lemon and I was the squeezer. It was Sunday evening and we went to church. Stopping at the end of a back pew I turned to the usher and said, "I guess we can squeeze in here."

"Yes," said the usher, "I guess we can, but wouldn't it be better to wait until you get home?"

But Mame refused to marry me till I had saved $3,000. "Many a man," said Mame, "has been fortunate to fly with a young man he couldn't buy a pair of chicken wings in a Hickman restaurant to his life."

The next day I went to work in just on this old place of mine to make that $3,000. That night I called me by phone and asked how I was getting along.

"Fine and dandy," I said, "fine and dandy."

The next night she called me, and although I knew Mame was game. "Do you know ing a new county court house? and how much have you saved?" she asked tenderly.

"Three-eighty-five," I replied.
"I—I—guess that is near enough," she stammered. "Come on up to night."

As I approached the house I heard beautiful strains of music from Mame's snow white throat there emanated in clear, soprano tones so very dear to me—melodic, silvery music. As I stood there enraptured, my heart bubbling over with love and effervescent like a beheaded bottle of champagne in a sweat-box, I glanced through the kitchen window. There, her arms plunged to the elbows in a pan of dough stood—Mame's mother, singing "We'll work till Jesus comes."

But Mame refused to marry me till I had saved $3,000. "Many a man," said Mame, "has been fortunate to fly with a young man he couldn't buy a pair of chicken wings in a Hickman restaurant to his life."

The awakening was too sudden. I turned and wandered to the innermost recesses of the bottom woodland—and thus ended a beautiful romance. Later when I discovered that the lock of Mame's hair I had been carrying in my watch was from her switch, I went over to one corner of Tom Fuller's place, iconoclast that I was, and interred both love and hair together. On a small marble slab one may still read: "Hic Jacet Love For Mame Forever More."

Mr. Editor, I guess you wonder why I have not written in so long,

The truth is about six weeks ago I felt an attack of rheumatism coming on in the night. Getting up I grabbed a bottle of my favorite liniment and gave my legs a thorough massaging, rubbing the pain-killer in as long as it would stick—that is as I thought is was my liniment. Next morning I discovered that I had a most beautifully varnished pair of legs. That's all.

Before I say anything about "what's so rare as a day in June," I would like to know if the weather will get warm enough for peek-a-boo waists and directoire gowns?

I see an advertisement in the Hickman paper stating that agents can make from $25 to $45 a week handling Mde. McCab's corsets. If the lady doesn't wear over 34 and

Ky. Endorses Bryan

At Harmonious Convention Held in Lexington Last Friday.
Democracy Re-united

Harmony was the keynote of the Democratic state convention at Lexington, Friday. What was expected to be a bitter struggle resulted in one of the most harmonious meetings of delegates ever held in this state. The net result was:

The selection of Representative A. O. Stanley, of Henderson, for temporary chairman without opposition. The selection of six delegates at large, giving each two-thirds of a vote.

The unanimous endorsement of Bryan.

A compromise on the organization of the party in the state.

Other important results of the convention were:

The booming of A. O. Stanley for the next candidate for governor. The endorsement of Urey Woodson, of Owensboro, for re-election as national committeeman by seven out of eleven districts, with promise of support in the other districts.

The Beckham forces were thoroughly defeated and the ex-governor decided not to oppose Stanley for temporary chairman. Then all factions got together and planned the harmony program, which was carried out to the letter.

The following delegates were appointed:

State-at-large—Ollie M. James, James B. McCreary, Col. W. B. Haldeman, T. H. Paynter, J. C. W. Beckham, John C. Mayo.

District Delegates—First District—Conn Line and Gus Thomas.

State Executive Committeemen—Henry R. Prewitt, Chairman; Jos. W. Pugh, of Kenton, A. G. Rhea, of Logan. First District—Henry R. Lawrence, of Trigg.

Credentials—First District—Mott Ayers, Fulton.

Organization Committee—First District—Judge E. Barry.

Resolutions Committee—First District—C. W. Richardson, Caldwell.

The convention was a love feast and the gathering will go down in history for the words of peace spoken by the leaders of the former warring factions which resulted in a Republican victory in Kentucky. There is no doubt in the minds of the leaders, but that Kentucky will give an old line Democratic majority this fall.

Only a few changes were recommended by the committee on permanent organization, and adopted by the convention.

Perhaps the most important change made in the party law has to do with the selection of precinct committeemen, and in the future all such committee are to be elected by the will of the Democratic voters of the respective precincts of which they desire to be committeemen. This is regarded as being one of the best rules made for the Democratic party in Kentucky, and the change is one which has been asked for by perhaps a greater number of Democratic voters through their delegates than any other change recommended by the committee on permanent organization.

One of the most important changes recommended by the committee on permanent organization is to the effect that the office of any state, county or precinct committeeman shall become vacant upon his becoming a candidate for the nomination for any office elective by the people, or upon his acceptance of any elective or appointive public political office. It was also the will of the committee on permanent organization that the action of mass-convention shall be null and void unless the president officer gives tellers and a count upon demand of a Democrat when such Democrat shall make such a request in a mass-convention.

Another change which is believed to be of much importance to the Democratic party in the state was also recommended by the committee on permanent organization and is to the effect that members of the Democratic state and executive committees can only give their proxies to a member of the committee of which he is a member.

The resolution committee reported the following resolutions, which were adopted with a whoop:

We, the representatives of the

SOUP OF FINE QUALITY.

Good Recipes That May Be New to Our Readers.

Delicious Soup.—Cook until tender two cupfuls of shelled and blanched peanuts, with a slice of onion and a stalk of celery; press through a sieve, reheat with one pint of white stock, and stir into a white sauce made of one-fourth of a cupful each of butter and of flour and a pint of milk. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Almond Soup.—Cut four pounds of knuckle of veal into small pieces. Break or saw the bones into small pieces, add three quarts of cold water, and let cook just below boiling point for about four hours; then add one onion, sliced, two stalks of celery, chopped, a sprig of parsley, a tablespoonful of salt, and six peppercorns.

Let simmer an hour longer; strain, and when cold remove the fat and heat again. Cream together one tablespoonful of butter and two tablespoonsfuls of corn starch; thin with a little of the hot soup, then turn into the soup, and boil for ten minutes. Add half a pint of cream, and season with salt and pepper to taste; then add one-fourth of a cupful of blanched almonds, pounded to paste.

Green Soup.—Wash and pick quite clean a quantity of spinach; place it in a sauceman with enough salt, and when done squeeze all the moisture out and pass through a hair sieve. Dilute the pulp thus procured with some well flavored stock until it is of the right consistency. Make hot, add a squeeze of lemon and a dash of pepper, and at the time of serving put a pat of butter in the turneau.

STEWED KIDNEY AND TOMATO.

Dish That Will Be Appreciated as Change in Menu.

One and one-half pounds of kidney, one pound of tomato, two teaspoonfuls of chopped parsley, one teaspoon of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper, two small onions, one ounce of flour, two tablespoonfuls of dripping. When fresh tomatoes are not procurable, canned ones may be used.

Remove the core and cut the kidney in slices about a quarter of an inch thick. Mix together the flour, salt, pepper and half the parsley. Melt the dripping in a sauceman, slice the onions, and fry them a golden brown in the dripping.

Dip the pieces of kidney in the seasoned flour, then put them in the pan with the dripping, put the lid on the pan, and let the contents cook gently for ten minutes, turning the kidney occasionally. Cook the tomatoes until soft, either in the oven or on the fire; then rub them through a sieve, add to the puree the rest of the parsley and the vinegar. Drain off as much of the fat as possible from the kidney, and add the tomato puree, bring to a boil, then let it simmer gently for 15 minutes.

Arrange a border of mashed potatoes in a hot dish and put the kidney and sauce in the center.

A Frozen Dainty Without a Freezer. A delicious form of ice cream which requires no freezer to make it is called mousse. It is easy to make and it has the advantage over the plain cream and ice in that it does not need to go into the freezer at all. To make this, boil a cupful of sugar and a cupful of water till they will thread; beat stiff the whites of three eggs and slowly pour the syrup over, beating steadily; when it is all in, beat till the whole is cold, then flavor, fold in a pint of whipped cream, and put it all in a covered pail and bury it in a pail of ice and salt for four hours. This, like the other ices, can be flavored with coffee or fruits, or it may be served as it is, with fresh fruits around the mold; or crushed macaroons can be put in, or nuts and coloring matter can be added; a pale green mousse flavored with a little pistache is very delicate and attractive, especially if served in glasses on a hot day.—Delineator.

Sour Cream Biscuit. Sift together three pints of flour and one scant teaspoonful of salt. Have ready board, pin, cutter and greased pans and see that the oven is very hot, for they must be put together and baked as quickly as possible. Into one pint of thick, sour cream sift (through a fine sieve) one level teaspoonful of baking soda. Stir this for an instant, then mix to a soft dough with the flour. Turn out on the board, pat out an inch thick, cut into rounds, place in the pans, brush the tops with milk and bake at once.

Grape Fruit Sauce. We are fond of grape fruit for breakfast, but find them expensive if one-half is served to each person. Therefore I take one large grape fruit, take pulp and juice from it, add the pulp of two or three oranges, cover well with sugar, and let stand over night. The next morning the sauce is delicious.

The Main Trouble. Most people would be satisfied with the kind of living they are making if other people were not living better.

JUNE HAS ARRIVED.

BELMONT IS DEAD

MILLIONAIRE SUCCUMBS TO PERITONITIS AFTER OPERATION.

WAS ONCE MEMBER OF CONGRESS

Son of the Late August Belmont Was Educated for the Navy, but Early Abandoned It.

Hempstead, L. I.—Oliver H. P. Belmont, after a week's struggle for life against peritonitis which succeeded an operation for appendicitis, died at 6:40 a. m. Wednesday.

Since Tuesday, Mr. Belmont had been in a state of coma, and, when his physician, Dr. Lanehart, after an all-night vigil, decided shortly before daylight that death was near, the family was called to the bedside of the dying millionaire.

The last Saturday in May, although the day was rainy and the air raw, he went down to Belmont Park to witness the running of the Belmont stakes.

At the time he appeared to have suffered no ill effects from the exposure and enjoyed the sport thoroughly. When the physicians were called on Monday, however, and diagnosed his illness as appendicitis they found his heart in such a condition that there was much hesitation before a decision to perform an operation was reached.

On Thursday, however, it became apparent that the only hope for his recovery lay in an operation.

Oliver Hazard Perry Belmont was the son of the late August Belmont and brother of August Belmont and Perry Belmont. To distinguish him from Perry, he was always called "Ollie."

When O. H. P. Belmont was young, it was decided that he should keep up the Perry family record by entering the navy. The Perry family is descended from the famous Commodore Perry.

Accordingly Mr. Belmont became an Annapolis cadet, but it had little attraction for him, and he soon left the academy.

COOPER TRIAL CLOSED.

Court Withholds Decision and Calls Gwinnett Case on Same Charge.

Havana.—The trial of Corporal Cooper of the Eleventh cavalry on the charge of murder closed Tuesday before the special military court at Camp Columbia. The court did not announce a decision, but called the case of Private Gwinnett on a similar charge. The prosecution and defense agreed to accept the testimony in the case against Cooper to answer for Gwinnett, with the privilege of introducing new witnesses. The court then adjourned subject to the call of the president.

Pioneer Pony Expressman Dead.

St. Joseph, Mo.—William Smith King, aged 82, one of the first riders of the famous Pony express between St. Joseph and the Pacific coast in pioneer days, and Indian fighter, is dead at his home in Amazonia, Mo. For 48 years he was employed by the Burlington railroad.

Steamer Sails into Port.

San Pedro, Cal.—The American steamer Lucy Neff, Captain Harding, out 122 days from Bath, Me., for San Francisco, with 500 tons of carbide, put in here Tuesday with a broken crank shaft to her propeller. The vessel came 2,000 miles under sail after the breakdown occurred.

Double Murder Charged.

Raleigh, N. C.—Ira Oakley, arrested in Clarksville, Va., has been brought here, charged with the murder of Mrs. J. Underwood and her young son and the burning of their house at Fugue Springs to conceal the crime on Feb. 1 last.

CONFEDERATE REUNION

CLEMENT A. EVANS ELECTED COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

Resolutions in Memory of Gen. Lee.
Plan to Buy the Birthplace of Jefferson Davis—Memphis Next Meeting Place.

Birmingham, Ala.—With the selection of Memphis as the place for the next reunion and the election of Gen. Clement A. Evans of Georgia as commander-in-chief to succeed the late Gen. Stephen D. Lee, the United Confederate Veterans adjourned their annual convention late this afternoon.

The selection of the place of meeting aroused great rivalry between Memphis and Atlanta, these two cities being the only ones put in nomination.

Gen. Clement A. Evans, the new commander-in-chief, is a man of pleasant address, and one of the most loved in the army. He is a native of Georgia and born of North Carolina and Virginia revolutionary parentage.

Gen. Evans Wins.

The civil war commenced while he was senator, and although he was exempt from military service, he joined a company in his county in January, 1861, and began his military career. He was first elected major of the 31st Georgia regiment, and then promoted to colonel. His regiment was put in Lawton's brigade, afterwards Gordon's brigade. Gen. Evans succeeded Gordon when he was promoted major-general, and again succeeded Gordon in command of division.

The crowd in the city continued to increase today. Reunions of various regiments, brigades and commands were held in all parts of the city. One of the most notable of these was that of the Forrest cavalry corps, which re-elected Gen. H. A. Tyler, of Tennessee, as commander.

To Buy Davis' Birthplace.

An interesting feature of the big reunion convention was the inauguration of the movement to buy the birthplace of Jefferson Davis. The Kentucky division announced that they had been working to this end for some time and asked the veterans to take steps to acquire the property. A committee of fifteen was named to investigate the feasibility of the project and report back next year. The home is located near Hopkinsville, Ky.

The scene of the downtown streets of Birmingham this evening was one of the most inspiring imaginable. When the floral parade passed through the streets, which were lined with veterans, and the bands successively struck up "Dixie" and the airs best loved in the South, the applause was deafening and tears streamed down the eyes of hundreds as the remnants of Forrest's cavalry swept by.

Election Was Interesting.

There was the greatest excitement in the convention hall this evening when the time came to elect a new commander-in-chief. After Gen. Irving Walker had taken the chair, Gen. Bennett H. Young nominated Gen. Evans in a glowing speech. Gen. Withers nominated Gen. Cabell, and the vote resulted: Gen. Evans 1,232, Cabell 1,084. In the contest for the place of next meeting the result was: Memphis 1,196, Atlanta 1,110.

Upon assuming command Gen. Evans issued the following general order No. 1:

"In obedience to the mandates of my beloved comrades as expressed in convention this day, I assume command of the United Confederate Veterans.

"Comrade Wm. E. Mickle is hereby appointed adjutant-general and chief of staff with the rank of major-general. He will immediately assume charge of the duties of the office and will be obeyed and respected accordingly."

Following the election of commander-in-chief, Gen. Geo. W. Gordon was elected commander of the department of Tennessee to succeed Gen. Evans; Gen. Irving Walker was re-elected commander of the army of Northern Virginia, and Gen. Cabell commander of the trans-Mississippi department.

Gen. W. A. Montgomery, of Edwards, Miss., that stalwart Mississippian, was designated to deliver the address at the memorial exercises held at noon by the Confederate reunion. In accordance with custom, when the noon hour arrived all business was suspended that memorial exercises could be held.

At the conclusion of Gen. Montgomery's address the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, first, That this organization of United Confederate Veterans do hereby express to the world and to each other our regard for him by rising with bowed and uncovered heads. We feel deeply our loss. The South has been deprived of a knightly defender, the whole country a patriotic citizen and Mississippi an adopted son of whom she is justly proud.

Second—We declare our love for him as a Christian citizen, whose life and character we hold out to the generations who are to follow us worthy of emulation. He was a man without guile, true to every duty that developed upon him and filling the psalmist description of a citizen of Zion: "Lord, who shall abide in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly and worketh righteousness and asketh the truth in his heart. He that walketh not with his tongue nor doth evil to his neighbor."

Third—We admired him as a soldier worthy of the cause for which he fought and bled, and one of our comrades whose rise to the distinction entitled him to be honored by the true soldiers of our country for all the years that are to come; the embodiment of chivalry, as knightly as any soldier who followed the banner of Charlemagne, or planted the Roman eagle on conquered tower or castle; whose courteous manner to erring foes challenged the admiration of his enemies.

Fourth—We cherish his memory, so full of love for his fellow-man, fired with so much zeal for the uplifting of the youth of our land, so tender in manner toward his loved ones, beloved by him and by us. We tender our deepest sympathies to his family, with the cheering comfort of having so glorious an heritage as to be the descendants of Stephen D. Lee.

One Dead, Two Hurt in Holdup.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—One man was shot dead and two women were wounded in a holdup near the southern limits of the city. The names of the dead and wounded have not as yet been learned.

Kills Wife, Shoots Himself.

Union Springs, Ala.—Postmaster A. C. Walter shot and killed his wife and then shot himself at the postoffice, where Mrs. Walter was employed as a clerk. Walter was removed from the postmastership recently.

Gas Explodes, Eleven Hurt.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The plant of the Prest-O-Light Co. on South street, generally pronounced to be one of the most successful reunions of the United Confederate Veterans. With sprightly step, measured by the airs the South loves, the old warriors no less than 10,000 strong, traversed the two miles of the parade route between lines of thousands of sympathetic and interested spectators and there was not an accident, not a sign of tottering step.

Loving hands served ice water to the old men as they passed along the route, fans were distributed and everything possible was done to relieve the long tramp of its tedium. That the heroes were in excellent spirits was shown by the fact that many of them sang old favorite camp songs as they marched, such as "Buttermilk Cavalry," "Old Time Confederates," "Bonnie Blue Flag." They were happy and they left a trail of tears among the spectators, for every one was touched by the sentimental appeal naturally made by the appearance of the old soldiers.

There were many in the parade who had left a leg or perhaps two legs on some bloody battlefield, but they enjoyed the occasions as much as the others, being carried in vehicles. Their appearance drew forth, if anything, greater applause than the sight of the foot soldiers.

National Guard as Escort.

The parade formed shortly after 11 o'clock and required one hour and forty-five minutes to pass given point. The route was from Sixth avenue on Nineteenth street to First avenue, to Twenty-first street, to Fifth avenue, to Twentieth street to First avenue, counter-marching on Twentieth street to Capitol Park, where the reviewing stand was located.

In the vanguard were eight companies of the local national guard, including one battery of artillery and one troop of cavalry. Chattanooga had one troop of cavalry in line. Gov. B. B. Comer, of Alabama, with his entire staff, was next in line. Gen. George P. Harrison, commander of the Alabama division, was chief marshal, and Col. E. J. McCrossin, of Birmingham, was chief aide.

Gen. Evans Leads Parade.

Gen. Clement A. Evans, the new commander-in-chief, was at the head of the column with his entire staff, consisting of Gen. J. F. Shipp, Gen. W. E. Mickle, Col. J. H. Bankhead, Col. W. B. Leedy, Col. J. Thompson Brown, Col. J. W. Reed and Col. Bass. The Sons of Veterans followed the Veterans themselves, and they were accompanied by their sponsors.

A noticeable feature of the parade was the fact that a number of the sponsors preferred to walk with the companies they represented rather than ride in the carriages which had been provided. Miss Mary Hall, clad in gray, accompanied the Georgia division on foot. Mrs. Kelly, of New Orleans, a lady 79 years of age, went through the march on foot, as did Miss Edna Robb, of Memphis, who had the title of "daughter of the company she represented."

Tonight thousands of veterans are leaving for home, but other thousands have gone to the Fair Grounds to witness the big display of fireworks, and still others will attend the ball at the Hippodrome, in honor of the veterans and their maids and sponsors. Balls were also given at the Country Club and at the Southern Club.

At the big ball tonight the Southern Cross Drill Corps of Memphis gave a splendid drill, first at the Hippodrome, where the official ball was given, the attendance being exceedingly large. Then the corps was escorted to the Country Club, where the corps rendered the second time the drill that has made them famous. There were cheers on all sides for the corps, and Memphis was the popular word on all tongues.

The hit made by the sponsors of Kentucky who sat on the back of an open carriage in the parade was only seconded by the sponsors of Tennessee. Louisiana's fair sex suffered by reason of the carriage they occupied. None of the sponsors will ever forget the social attentions that were paid them in Birmingham. At the Hippodrome and Country Club tonight they were given a most enjoyable time. All three days were crowded with rounds of pleasure.

GEN. TYLER RE-ELECTED.

Will Continue to Command Forrest's Cavalry Troop.

Birmingham, Ala.—At the meeting of the members of Forrest's cavalry corps to day Gen. Henry A. Tyler was re-elected commander. The attendance at this auxiliary meeting of the Confederate reunion was large. The old cavalrymen turned out in floral parade this afternoon on horseback and made a noble appearance. There were many of the Memphians, Alabamians and Kentuckians in this brigade and Gen. Tyler's headquarters in the Morris hotel have been thronged at all times.

The business meeting was held in Gilder's hall, which was crowded during the past two days. There was no opposition to the re-election of Gen. Tyler.

MONUMENT TO SLAVES.

Veterans Will Honor Them for Fidelity and Faithful Service.

Birmingham, Ala.—The following resolutions were adopted in the reunion today:

"Whereas, There has been, and still is, a ready recognition throughout the Southern states of the faithful and praiseworthy conduct of the slaves toward their owners and unprotected families during our interstate war from 1861 to 1865; and

"Whereas, We deem it just and due the good name of said slaves, as also to their former owners and to history, be it

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the delegates that a monument be erected at some central site in the South to the fidelity and allegiance of the slaves."

Round About the State

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

INVASION BY MILITARY ILLEGAL,

Declared Blue Grass Judge in Charge to Grand Jury.

KILLED BY BRAWNY WIFE

Was Affinity of the Breathitt County Mountaineer.

Paris, Ky.—In a sensational charge to the grand jury, Judge Robert L. Stout declared that while no depredations had been committed in Bourbon county by night riders, a detachment of state guards had invaded its peaceful confines and intimidated and terrorized a young farmer, and demanded at their hands that the matter be probed to the bottom.

He asked by whose authority soldiers had been brought into the county, and said that unless circuit courts and grand juries took cognizance of military marauders, Kentuckians would be deprived of their liberties and bayonet rule be established.

He likened the situation to that of Russia, and declared that the invasion of the military was unauthorized, illegal and unwarranted.

DAMAGES AWARDED

To Woman Who Was Injured On Her First Railroad Trip.

Frankfort, Ky.—While taking her first ride on a railroad train Mrs. Mary Lorton, of Burnside, Pulaski county, was injured by a window of the coach failing and smashing her hand. She secured $325 damages from the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific Railroad Co. in a judgment in the Pulaski circuit court. This judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals. The court in rendering the decision says: "It is the duty of railroad companies to keep and maintain their passenger coaches, including the windows and doors, in a good condition for the safety, convenience and comfort of its passengers. A failure to do so makes them liable for damages."

Should Learn to Support Husband.
Louisville, Ky.—Women who want to develop careers, according to Dr. John W. McGarvey, president of Bible College, Transylvania university, should learn to support husbands. The Lexington professor in a baccalaureate oration to the graduates of the University of Louisville, at Warren Memorial church, said that as time passed woman was topping man's business and worldly plane, and that the time had come for her to become a bread winner for the family.

Strike Ends.

Lexington, Ky.—The strike of the miners of the Imperial Coal Co. in Breathitt county ended after being in force ten days. One hundred and fifty men returned to work at the old wage scale. The men struck because of the discharge of Mine Superintendent Davis. He was not re-employed. The mines furnish fuel for several mountain railroads.

Noted Educator to Retire.

Lexington, Ky.—Prof. John H. Neville, A. M., LL. D., 80, and for 60 years a teacher in public institutions, announced that he had put aside the harness and would retire from the classroom. He has made application for a pension from the Carnegie fund.

Two Residences Burned.

Mayfield, Ky.—Fire destroyed the residences of Mrs. Annie Clarkson and Mrs. Lucy Young. The loss is about $4,000, with little insurance. Both houses were just across the line in the county and the fire department could not give any assistance.

Capt. Gross At Death's Door.

Cloverport, Ky.—Capt. Jack Gross is critically ill at his home at Holt, and his death is momentarily expected. Mr. Gross was United States marshal during Cleveland's administration in 1854, and was adjutant general under John Young Brown.

Strike Declared Off.

Madisonville, Ky.—The strike of union miners which has been on in Hopkins, Webster, Union and Christian counties since January 1 was declared off in a statement given out by the national board members of this district.

Jefferson's Birthday.

Lexington, Ky.—At the meeting of the Lexington Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, Mrs. C. D. Chenault will submit a proposition to petition the legislature to declare June 3, the anniversary of the birth of Jefferson Davis, an annual holiday in Kentucky.

I. C. Cuts Time.

Paducah, Ky.—The machinists, boiler makers and blacksmiths of the Illinois Central shops were cut to four days a week to curtail expenses. The car department is not affected.

Killed At Ball Game.

Mayfield, Ky.—Lloyd Shelton, 18, was killed at a ball game by being hit in the breast with a ball thrown wild from second to first base. He was a spectator and had just arrived at the game. He died in five minutes.

Kills His Rival.

Glen Hays, Ky.—Defeated by John Smith, 18, in a contest for the affections of a young woman, Joe Saammon, 17, killed his rival with a bullet and threw the body from a moving train here.

STIRRED TO ANGER

PROTECTIONISTS DENOUNCE TARIFF AGREEMENT.

Action Shows What Little Idea the Trusts and Protected Interests Have of Allowing Any Revision After Election.

The protectionists who manufacture knitted goods, such as hosiery and underwear, and who benefit so largely by the tariff preventing foreign competition, have severely denounced President Roosevelt for the tariff agreement with Germany. This tariff agreement with Germany allows the German manufacturers to reduce the valuation of the goods they export to the United States to the actual cost in Germany, which is below what the United States government appraisers would assess the goods for, and thus the official value being decreased the ad valorem rate of duty is also decreased.

Before this agreement was made with Germany the protectionists, who controlled the appraisal department of the custom house in New York, increased the value of imported goods beyond their real value in the country from which they were exported, and thus actually increased the duties paid. The effect of the new agreement is to allow the values shown in the consular invoices which have been certified by the German chambers of commerce, and other commercial bodies, to stand as the appraised value on which ad valorem duty is paid.

Resolutions were adopted by the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers at their late meeting at Philadelphia, which declared: "Whereas, The United States government has entered into a tariff trade agreement with the German empire which embodies important customs administrative concessions and important amendments to the customs administrative act.

"Resolved, That the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers, in annual convention assembled, earnestly protests against the provisions of the German tariff agreement now extended to other countries of Europe as contrary to law, contrary to the policy of protection, injurious to American labor, unfair to the honest importer, demoralizing to the customs service and in effect a material and indiscriminate reduction in the tariff, which should be made only after hearings have been granted and then only by the legislative branch of the government; and

"Resolved, That the National Association of Hosiery Manufacturers thank the congress of the United States for not adopting the recommendations of the administration as to the amendments in our customs laws."

This derunciation of President Roosevelt for making this agreement with Germany "contrary to law" and contrary to the policy of protection, indicates what strenuous opposition all the trusts and protected interests will put forth to prevent tariff revision "after election."

The strike to congress "for not adopting the recommendations of the administration as to the amendments in our customs laws" shows how the standpat Republican leaders in congress saved the day for the trusts.

The cotton schedule is only one of the many in the tariff law that forces up prices, but every other schedule is equally protective to the trusts, and monopolists that have found shelter under the so-called protective system.

The whole power of the organized trusts and the tariff protected monopolists will be found aiding the re-election of Republican congressmen, who will promise to again standpat after election.

Perpetuating the tariff protection allows these manufacturers to collect their share of the tariff, which is a much higher tax on what the people buy than is paid in the aggregate for tariff taxes to the government.

For whereas but comparatively few goods are imported upon which the tariff taxes are collected, all the products of the trusts are likewise increased in price in consequence of the tariff preventing competition, so that it comes to this, if you are rich and can buy the finer and more costly imported goods, you pay the tariff tax to the government, while if you are poor and obliged to buy the products of our protected trusts, you pay the tariff tax indirectly to the protected manufacturers in larger profits.

If the next congress is Republican the same old standpat crowd will control, and although there may be a shifty promise in the Republican platform for tariff revision "after election" how far, or how deep, the revision will go will never be actually stated.

In fact, the Republican leaders from Secretary Root down to the standpat congressmen have decided and announced that the plan is to revise the tariff higher by adding maximum rates on the goods imported from Germany, France and other countries that impose a high tariff on imports from the United States.

The present rates to be the minimum tariff on imports from England, Holland and other low-tariff countries.

Under such a maximum and minimum tariff, the trusts would have more shelter than they now do, and no reduction in trust prices could be looked for. The protectionists when they tell the truth, as the hosiery manufacturers have done, show that no tariff reform is intended, but rather a continuation of the standpat policy that is now plundering us for the benefit of the tariff protected manufacturer, and supporting the Republican party with campaign contributions as the price for standing pat.

IS A DANGEROUS DOCTRINE.

The president of the United States holds his place and exercises his authority by virtue of Article 2 of the Constitution of the United States, in which it provides that he shall be commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and of the state militia, when called into the actual service of the United States; but that congress shall have power to make rules for the regulation of the land and naval forces.

Congress has enacted a military code known as the Articles of War; and these articles provide that no officer shall be punished without a trial before a court-martial. The Articles of War are just as binding upon the commander-in-chief of the army as they are upon subordinate officers. For any officer to violate any of them, is to become subject to trial and punishment. O'Brien says in his work on courts-martial:

"In all that relates to raising the army, to its strength, to its organization, to its criminal code, congress is omnipotent, the president powerless."

"The command of the president is, indeed, absolute within its sphere, but its sphere is bounded on all sides by law. The moment the executive oversteps the boundaries prescribed, he becomes powerless, and his commands are of no force."

"As the executive has no legislative power, it is plain that the regulations issued by him to the army are not law."

"And, as he is as much bound by law as any other citizen, it follows that if any of them conflict with law, they are so far null and void."

Mr. Porter, in his work on the same subject, says: "We have in our military law no system of disciplinary punishments."

All the authorities on the subject are to the same effect. Yet the president has punished Col. Stewart of the coast artillery without any sort of trial, and when complaint was made by Senator Rayner of Maryland the president answered that "the punishment of Col. Stewart was wholly incidental" to the good of the army, and was, therefore, justifiable. His position is that the end justifies the means, law or no law. This is a dangerous doctrine. He also says: "While a court-martial would undoubtedly award some punishment, it would fall far short of what was really needed." And again he says: "There is no point in having a court-martial. At present I do not see how a court of inquiry could be of use. . . . I do not understand your allusion to a joint resolution by congress. Such measures as those taken in this case are purely within the scope of the president's duties and authority."

Senator Rayner, in a recent speech, brought out all these points and in commenting thereon raised the most important question of law that has ever confronted congress or the people of the United States. "Is the president, as commander-in-chief of the army governed by law?" If he is not, the republic is at an end. For in that case, the military is placed above the civil power and the constitution is annihilated.

Centralization.

Perhaps the dominant issue in the coming campaign will be the centralization of political power in this country, emphasized by the dispute between the president and congress over the absolutism claimed by the president over the military and naval forces. The supremacy of the military over the civil power would mean in itself the establishment of a central despotism. The letters of the president to Senators Smith, Stewart, Rayner and Taliaferro, in all of which he makes the astounding claim that he is supreme over the army, and is thereby rendered independent of acts of congress relating to military affairs, will play a great part in the campaign.

If Gov. Johnson should be the Democratic candidate, and Taft, Roosevelt, or any other advocate of Roosevelt's politics (or policies), the Republican candidate, the issue would be squarely drawn, and the people would have the opportunity to decide, once for all, whether the constitution is obsolete or is still possessed of its old-time vitality.

Our people do not often recur to first principles in these days. Too many feel that a mess of pottage to satisfy present hunger is better than a great estate in expectancy, and are too ready to barter away their birthright to freedom and local self-government for a sum of money from the federal treasury. One of the leading newspapers of the country makes note of this disposition among the governors of states recently assembled at Washington. It says:

"A thousand influences are at work to obliterate states' rights to one that operates the other way. The propaganda of centralization does not have its heart in Washington. It is in the people themselves, who are demanding this or that reform and are failing to get it from their states. A state gladly surrenders its authority over lands, or streams, or water power, or other property, for the sake of getting an appropriation from congress for a public improvement. The eagerness with which California accepts federal aid in dealing with the bubonic plague situation illustrates how easily material benefit overrides abstract ideas of states' rights. The readiness of such a stalwart states' rights man as Gov. Glenn of North Carolina to permit the government to take charge of the Appalachian forest in his own and other states, is another example of the demoralizing effect of conditions upon theories."

Underwood Standard Typewriter

HISTORY:

All new models of typewriters since the UNDERWOOD became prominent, have been of Underwood form—visible writing.

OLD PROPHECY:

Years ago a bold prophecy was made—"THE MACHINE YOU WILL EVENTUALLY BUY IS THE UNDERWOOD." This is rapidly becoming history.

NEW PROPHECY:

All old style machines will soon be superseded by Underwood form—visible writing machines.

A SUGGESTION:

Buyers will please "Govern themselves accordingly," accepting no experiments and buying no passing models. No mistakes can be made by placing orders with the company that introduced and perfected VISIBILITY, revolutionized typewriter construction, captured the world's championships, preserved the salaries of salesmen and managers, and worked its way into the hearts of the buyer and operator. Investigate the conditions of the second-hand market.

GRATITUDE:

With sincere thanks to the hundreds of thousands of UNDERWOOD patrons for past favors, we beg to remain, Very respectfully,

"Coming here! I wonder who it can be!"

"Too bad, Norrette; if flying machines were numbered as automobiles used to me, your curiosity might be satisfied at least three minutes sooner."

The airship settled slowly.

"It's Jack! Mary, Mary—oh, she's gone! A pretty chaperon she makes. No wonder I can't endure him, thrown at his head as I am. Well, let him come; I'm not afraid. I'll marry him or not, as I choose."

He swung easily toward her. "I'm not glad to see you," was her rude greeting.

"Indeed?" cheerfully. "I'm delighted to see you. What wedding garment are you making now?"

"None for any wedding of yours."

"Then put it away and fly with me. By nightfall we shall have reached the moon, where the fairies live, and there we can be wedded. You shall be bound so gently that even you will forget to fret at love's silken cords Come!"

"Silly, can't you see I'm busy?"

"I can see that you are saucy. Permit me," and without ado he picked her up, sewing and all, and ran with her to the ship. In an instant they were off, and Norette, red with anger, was tugging at the knots in her thread.

"I love you," said the man.

"Ninety-nine times!" snapped the girl, taking her teeth from a knot.

"There is luck in nines."

"Luck!" She glanced up scornfully, then a strange light leaped to her eyes and a quick color to her cheeks. Another machine, the ship of the rival lover, silently sailed behind them. The girl knew that he could hear her every word. "I would throw myself from the ship before I would marry a man who attempted to run away with me."

As she spoke she perched perilously near the edge of the boat and her eyes flew past Jack's shoulder and shone full into the eyes of the rival lover. He read her message and answered her daring with a nod and smile. In an instant the second machine gilded noiselessly beneath the larger one and slightly to one side.

The girl swung deliberately over the rail and swayed toward what seemed a reckless plunge to death. With a powerful effort Jack broke the spell which held him, and, springing forward, cried: "No, no, Norrette. I will never—" but the word froze on his lips as the outstretched hand of the rival lover rose from space to steady her into the other car, where, in defiance she sung out: "Go, take your trip to the silver moon, ha, ha!" Both men were pale. "It was a wicked thing to do," said Jack. Then with a quick tug, he changed his course and shot away toward the gleaming sun.

"No wonder men adore you," said the rival lover. "Norrette, when will you marry me!"

"Don't!" commanded the girl, in sudden fright. "I was a fool. This is no time for love-making. Take me home."

"But, my answer; you promised it to-day."

"Did I? To-night, then, not now."

"To-night, when the moon is full," he whispered. She nodded and was gone.

In the shadows of the court Norrette lingered among her roses. There was a fluttering, a gleam of white silvered in the moonlight, and presently Jack found her there.

"Norrette, I was rude. I offer no excuse, there is none. But until to-day I did not know that you really hated me. I was foolish enough to think that—you cared. Can you forgive me before I go away?"

She held out her hand.

"Thank you," he said gently; "I was afraid you would not forgive. Good-by, Norrette."

"Don't go—yet," she faltered. "You—I you haven't said good-by to Mary."

"You may tell her."

"But—"

"Well?"

"I—Jack, can't you—see?"

"I see a man running down the stairs," said Jack dully. "I must go."

"Oh, it is he!" whispered Norrette fearfully. "He is coming—after me. Jack, Jack, dear, take me quickly! I do love you."

No dullness could fail to respond to that eager pleading and to the clinging of those trembling fingers. In the shadow of the friendly balcony he bent and kissed her willing lips.

"Norrette," called a deep voice from across the moonlit court.

"I am here," said the girl from her lover's arms. "I am here," she repeated, dragging Jack forward into the white light. "I'm sorry—I mean I'm glad that I am going to marry Jack! You see—Aunt Mary thinks I ought. And—won't—won't you have some fruit before you go? It's on the roof!"

MINT WORTH KNOWING.

If one is ever seized with a sudden hemorrhage from the lungs, the first thing to be done, before the doctor gets there, is to take dry salt as quickly as possible. This often prevents further bleeding entirely. A teaspoonful of salt is not too much to take, provided it is done gradually, so as not to choke. The patient should, moreover, keep perfectly quiet and free from excitement and stay in a room not too hot.

THAT GAME ON THE LONG GREEN

What Congress Has Not Done.

In reviewing the work of Congress, which has just adjourned the Republicans themselves can find very little to commend, while those Republicans who believe in the President's policies will find much to condemn. It has absolutely ignored every important recommendation made by the President. It is a Congress guilty more of sins of omission than of commission. It failed to remove the duty on wood pulp, because the paper trust was opposed to it, in the face of the fact that the demand from the people was overwhelming. The Republicans were even afraid to let the matter come to a vote in the House, because they knew it would pass. Even a worse case of omission was the strangling in the committee the Publicity bill which required political parties to publish a full list of campaign expenses and from what sources the funds were derived. The Democratic leader, John Sharp Williams, challenged in vain for a vote on this matter. In the face of the fact that the trusts are prospering at the expense of the public largely through the high protective tariff not a particle of tariff reform legislation was permitted. Admitting in their State platforms that the tariff needs revision a Republican Congress absolutely refused to consider it. About all that Congress has done has been to pass a makeshift currency bill and to break the record for extravagant appropriations in the face of the condition that the whole country is economizing to meet financial depression. The record of Congress instead of strengthening the Republican party will be an element of great weakness in the approaching Presidential race.

Surprise Wedding.

A quite wedding took place at the home of Rev. W. H. McLesky Saturday night which was a complete surprise to the parties most interested, Mr. Leonard Holland, formerly of Water Valley, and Miss Annie Mai Baker, of this city. While Mr. Holland and Miss Baker had been intimate friends for many months, it was little suspected that these young people would resolve to fight life's battles together.

Miss Baker, the daughter of E. P. Baker and wife, is one of the best known and most highly respected young ladies of this city, and the groom, though practically a new citizen of Fulton, has made many friends here, who wish for the newly weds, much happiness and prosperity.—Fulton Leader.

No Paper July 4th.

In order to give the employees of this office a much needed vacation, we will print no paper during 4th of July week. No job work will be done between June 25 and July 6. Our patrons will please govern themselves accordingly.

Our Fiftieth Year.

This week the Courier begins on its fiftieth year's work.

One bright June day, in 1859, the first copy of the Hickman Courier was printed. Almost a half-century has passed since that day, and through all the years that have followed, the Courier has withstood the storms that have assailed and banished many of its contemporaries, and, like Tennyson's brook, "goes on forever."

Among the musty, time-worn volumes of this old paper may be found many a touching story—half-forgotten joys and tragedies—whose actors in life's drama have long since passed away. While time has wrought many changes, the Courier's press, with her wanted regularity, has continued from week to week, from year to year, to chronicle the happenings which make the history of a city, state and nation. The Courier has not only seen generations come and go and Hickman—her first love—grow from a little hamlet to a thriving, progressive city, but in the warp and woof of the past she has followed the shuttle of action through war, pestilence, floods, national disasters, political triumph and down-fall, the advance of civilization, and the modernizing of the present age, and lastly the development of the grandest and greatest nation on earth. It would be hard to enumerate those things of interest which have transpired during the scope of the Courier's age. Any of us will concede they are many.

Most of you know that the Courier is the oldest paper in Western Kentucky, and is a venerable establishment when compared with any institution in the state. It is also the oldest business establishment in Hickman. It might be of interest to our younger readers to know that the Courier from 1859 to 1875 was only one-fourth as large as at present and cost the subscriber $2.50 a year. The advertiser of that day paid almost three times as much for advertising space and rarely changed his "ad" over once a month.

A Thrilling Incident at Sea.

"Ship-wrecked four times I've bin," said the teller of the story, "and the last was about the most excitin' of 'em all. Want to 'ear about it? Right oh!"

"My ship was the Glencairn, cap'en of her Nicholls by name. 'E'd 'is wife and baby aboard, kid only 16 months old. We was wrecked off Cape Horn in July; struck the rocks in an 'eavy a gale as ever I've known; fog, and snow, and ev'ry luxury, as one might say. Two men drowned in gettin' off the lifeboat. Tried twice, we did, and the second time was successful.

"Mrs. Nicholls and the kid were got in, but the sea was that rough and tempestuous we couldn't land nowhere, and back we come to the wreck agin, and a awful night we spent. I can tell yer, thinking as 'ow she'd break up any minute.

"Next day we'd another try; the boat was launched right enough, and the missis was lowered into 'er. Then the cap'en with the kid in 'is arms went to the stern of the wreck, and we watched breathless-like to see what 'e would do, holdin' the boat with our oars as best we could with them great waves tossin' us about like a shuttlecock.

"Well, the cap'en shouted somethin' to the mate, who stood in the boat with 'is arms stretched out, and when the cap'en hollered again 'e just chucked that blessed kid across the bit of 'eaving water, and the mate 'e got it all right, and laid it in the bottom of the boat whilst the cap'en came aboard some'ow 'isself."

"That kid didn't care a mite! It just crawled about amongst our legs, as jolly as a sandboy, till its ma got 'old of it. She was in a pretty takin', I can tell yer, when she saw 'er off-spring 'urled inter space.

"Well, we got ashore this journey, or I shouldn't be 'ere a-tellin' you of this yarn, and the Injuns met us brim-

Lim Jucklin on The Country Editor's Dinner

By Dixie Read

Col. Shang W. Mowlett, the editor of the country paper, while out for a day among his subscribers, halted at the house of old Limuel Jucklin. He had time to stop only a few moments, he said; a delinquent tax list demanded his attention at home, and as his "patent side" had not as yet been reclaimed from the merciless maw of the express office, nothing toward the printing of his next number could be done until after his return to town.

And after sitting a long time it seemed as if he were about to go. He took up his hat and had made a motion to put it on his head when his attention was seized upon by the rattle of dishes in the dining-room, just across the broad passageway in the north section of the old log house. It is of no doubt that the embryo crowding of a half-feathered dominecker had appealed to the scribe to break his fast at the house of his "constant reader," and as he drove into the yard he was seen to cook his eye at a Plymouth Rock pullet.

But as the hours wore hungrily along he saw no signs of dinner. In no seeming fear of danger the chickens walked about the yard. And from the window, where a perfumed breeze murmured music amid the tendrils of a trumpet vine, the editor looked across a corner of the garden into a lot where in the sunshine sucking pigs, just big enough, if roasted, to hold crab apples in their mouths, were tumbling over one another.

Not with an extra effort of memory was it that the newspaper man recalled the fact that his pre-daylight breakfast had consisted mainly of sodden cakes and extreme hurry. It was fresh in his mind as he heard the "pot rack, pot rack" of a guinea hen and sneezes before breakfast there's likely to be rain in northwest township, range east. Looks that way to me, too; and I reckon I'll have to make my preparations accordin'. But, speakin' of breakfast there ain't nothin' nicer, to my notion, than a piece of roasted pig, with the brown crust on it, broiled on the coals. Oh, I hear of folks that for breakfast eat hot milk and doll stuffin', but that don't touch the spot where I live. Now a right nice yaller-leg chicken, a leetle more than half grown, snatched off'n the face of the earth and fried before he knows what's the matter with him—he's some. I want to tell you. Made up your mind y'all as to who is to be the next president? But I reckon you've been so busy you hasn't paid much attention to it. This here social life, too, keep you on the trot a good deal, I reckon. And dinners, too; you have to go to them; and they eat dinners now in the night, I'm told. I like 'em best when the sun gets just about as high as it kin, but the time don't make so much difference as what they have to eat. Sorry my wife ain't at home. She could skeer up a bite for you. She got my dinner as quick as she could and hurried over to one of the neighbors, where the old maid school teacher ain't expected to live till sundown. Nearly all the women folks in the neighborhood are flockin' over there, and I reckon they'll have a good time.

The sun lost its balance and slipped over into the afternoon, the waving vine at the window sifted a softer light, and still there was no call from pot or pan. So, at last, the editor arose and was about to put his hat on his head when there came from the dining-room the rattle of dishes. Then he hesitated, turned about as if he had just thought of a wise thing to say, and sat down.

"I reckon a cat must have run over the table," said old Lim, and Shang W. Mowlett's heart beat low in despair.

"Sorry, colonel, you didn't come a little earlier. Reckon you seen some of them pigs out there. Had one of their brothers roasted to a fall of the year brown, and—" The editor min' over with the milk of 'uman kindness; rigged up a shelter for us, and there we stopped for a bloom'in' week.

"That kid was dressed up in skins, and its mammy carried it pick-a-back, for all the world like them squaws. Then we'd a pretty rough journey 'cross country to a missionary's house, where we'd a good rest, and bime-by, we come to Rio Grande, a little matter of 40 mile or so.

"But it 'ud take too long to tell you of the country we passed through, or of our adventures, for we'd a stiffish time afore we got to civilization. But that habby! Well, there! It just made my 'eart jump into my mouth when I seed 'im thrown overboard! And it was the 'cutest little cuss you ever saw, rigged out in them outlandish skins.

"Ain't it wunnerful what they small critters will live through? Where did we sail from? Puntas' Arenas, if that 'elps you much, and our ship was the Crita, and jolly glad we all was to see them there old Dover cliff agin. Yes, I've bin four times wrecked, and p'raps I'll be four times more. Who knows?"

"The kid's mother she took to all our 'ardships very kind, and stepped out like a good 'un whenever there was any marchin' ter be done. We 'ad a good bit of it altogether, and a good many shocks one way and another, but she came through 'em all smilin'."

"The only thing as upset 'er was when the cap'es threw the kid!"

Being Original

thing is terribly crowded. But I always managed to get attention, one way or another."

"How's that? What do you mean?" demanded her spouse, suspiciously, but Mrs. Steelby hurried on without noticing the interruption.

"It was an awfully hard day, John. You men have no notion what a drain this Christmas shopping is. Especially when you insist upon being original. By one o'clock I was completely fagged out. I happened to run across

Mrs. Peter's just then and we went up to the lunchroom and had a cup of tea. I wasn't going to eat anything and she thought at first she would just have glass of milk, but everything looked so good that we ended by ordering a chafing-dish lobster and some salad and coffee and ices. After that we both felt rested."

"H'm" remarked Steelby to his coffee cup. "It takes these delicate little women to put it all over a coal-heaver when it comes to appetite!"

"But it is such a satisfaction to know that you have accomplished a lot," pursued his wife, dreamily. "I don't mind being all tired out and missing five calls and tearing my lace waist in a basement bargain department. I feel very grateful to Mrs. Briggs for putting it into my head to be really original this Christmas."

"What did you get?" inquired Steelby, with his first real appearance of interest. He placed his napkin on the table and sat back in his chair, much soothed in spirit by an excellent dinner, and prepared to listen to a long catalogue of novel and striking purchases.

"I got—" began Mrs. Steelby, impishly, and paused. "I got," she went on after a moment, checking off the items on the fingers of her left hand, "six monogram handkerchiefs for Ned, a game for Willie and calendar for Sue, a box of notepaper for each of Cousin Harry's children, a book for your sister, a necklace for each of your brothers, and for you—a big, lovely box of cigars!"

For moment Steelby remained staring at his wife. Then he burst into a roar of laughter.

"Original!" he gasped, between paroxysms. Finally he quieted down and wiped his eyes. "Let's sample that box now, Mrs. Steelby," he suggested.—Chicago Daily News.

Directoire Gowns.

The latest development in the realm of fashion, is what is known as the "Directoire Gown," a willowy, figure-fitting costume, which is in reality a revival of the ancient costumes worn by the Grecian ladies. In speaking of this new sensation, the Drygoodsman of St. Louis, says:

"About a month ago the fashion world was startled by the appearance at one of the Sunday afternoon races of four young women attired in Directoire gowns of radical and sensational type. The sheath-fitting gowns, which revealed the figure in almost every line and curve, and the low yoke and tight sleeve of diaphanous material, are said to have shocked the blase Parisians.

The feature of the gowns which caused the sensation was the opening at the side of the skirt, which revealed the foot, ankle and calf almost to the knee. Now within a little more than four weeks after their appearance at Paris, we are having exhibits of them in American department stores. While it is true that the extreme styles have not been taken seriously, it is conceded that even the most radical models are forerunners of fashion and indicate that for the coming season the Directoire styles will be strongly felt, and must be reckoned with."

Oldest Congressman Dead.

John Vines Wright, who was the oldest living exmember of Congress, died Tuesday at his home in Washington. Although near 80 years old he had been regularly at his desk in the Government Land Office until two months ago, when he had a stroke of paralysis. He had the unique distinction of making more treaties with the Indians than any other man.

Judge Wright was born in McNaury county, Tenn., in 1828 and was educated in Louisville. He was admitted to the bar in 1852 and was elected to Congress in 1854, serving in the memorable session preceding the Civil War. He resigned when Tennessee seceded in 1861, and served in the army until he was elected a member of the Confederate Congress. While Colonel of the Thirteenth Tennessee regiment Judge Wright had his horse shot from under him at the Battle of Belmont.

Anonymous Letter Writers.

A young fellow, who sent threatening anonymous letters to farmers in Lincoln county and who was caught dead to rights by a detective, gladly compromised after being indicted by paying $325 and going to jail for six months. The postal authorities will doubtless get him also.

This is paying pretty severely for the cowardly habit, but if anonymous letter writers learn a lesson from his punishment, he will not have suffered in vain. Of all the miserable cowards on earth the letter writer who fails to sign his name is the most craven.—State Journal.

Telephone Cases Decided.

The Court of Appeals has rendered a decision in the cases of Dr. S. K. Davidson vs. the Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co., and the city of Hickman vs. the same corporation, but we are unable to learn the real facts in the case further than that the telephone company wins the former case and the city wins the latter.

Davidson's suit was brought for the collection of all money paid by him and others to the company which is in excess of the rates embodied in the franchise granted by this city. The franchise rates are business houses $2.50 and residences $1.50 per month. The company has been charging and collecting $2.75 for business houses and $1.65 from residences.

In the city's case, if we understand it, the company will be forced to comply with the franchise rate except that we will not get the franchise to other towns as specified.

The city brought this suit to hold the company to the terms of the franchise, which goes to the Hickman subscribers free service to Fulton, Mayfield, Paducah and other towns, and a less rate for phones in the city than was being charged.

P. G. Cunningham and family, who moved to Clinton, Ky., several months ago visited relatives and friends in East Hickman, last week.

A petition was filed in the United States Court at Nashville, on behalf of the Interstate Commerce Commission to compel the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway to provide equal accommodations for negroes as that given white passengers.

It is the general rule of the Cumberland people to furnish service to its subscribers to any part of the county, in which the subscribers reside, free, but whether this will now apply to Fulton county remains to be seen.

The court's decision in this matter tends to establish the fact that the company will be forced to furnish service to Hickman during the life of the franchise, which is granted for a term of 20 years, and will, therefore, not expire until 1919.

In all probability we will get what the law allows us.

It will spread more freely, look better, go farther and last longer than any hand-mixed lead, or so-called "cheap" paint. A thin coat of paint looks and wears better than a thick coat. The thinner paint is applied, the better, so long as it covers. B. P. S. is so perfectly mixed and finely ground that it can be rubbed out more and spread on thinner than any hand-mixed or "cheap" paint. B. P. S. will cover 300 square feet or more to the gallon, two coats, and the cost of paint for one square yard of the average surface is 4 1/2c to 5c. This means a satisfactory job in every way.

Greater Corn Crops.

Every farmer located in the corn belt is desirous of growing as much corn per acre as possible and it is the fault in many instances of the corn land owner if he does not do so.

In this section our farmers are learning that it is profitable to study the minor details that affect the production of a good healthy corn crop.

Proper soil and good drainage are the first two requisites. We have the former and cannot afford to do without the latter.

Then disk well both ways of the field before breaking up the soil. This cultivates the soil and pulverizes thoroughly the portion that is to grow and nourish the roots. Before disk the soil it is proper to get all the manures upon the farm onto this soil and thoroughly disk it in by the operation. Then you are ready to break up the soil with a good plow.

You will find this last operation greatly lightened by the disking and you can not only plow better furrows, but deeper as well than where you have a rigid and unworked surface before you. The tilth of the entire field is greatly lightened and much easier prepared for planting.

This operation pays great returns when done in the proper manner and not only pays in growing corn alone, but as well in growing the potato crop.

Then grade your seed, both in quality and quantity. In quality first. Do not shell into your basket one single ear that you are doubtful of in appearance.

Test each ear, urges the Epitomist, by shelling off a few grains and placing them upon a muslin mat marked off in checks and numbered, numbering the ears to correspond. Place this mat into a good-sized flat box filled with moist earth or sawdust. In a few days you can discard the worthless grains and the ears to which they belong, for they have failed to germinate or are weakly in sprouting. Shell off the tips and butts. No use for them. Yet they will grow and produce, but plenty of nice uniform grains will make a more even stand.

the cement as it was about hard, with lag screws, and when the cement was set the saucers were firm and solid.

In Fig. 2 is shown a wooden frame to be placed in a pit as a foundation.

Cross-Over for Barbed Wire Fence. Anyone who has ever tried to cross over a barbed wire fence knows how difficult it is to accomplish it without injury to body or clothing. A safe passage may be arranged by taking two short boards or pieces of plank six inches wide and long enough to reach from the ground to four inches above the fence. Nail these strips securely to the fence post, slanting out at the bottom about two feet from the post. To these pieces nail three cross pieces on either side of the fence thus forming what is practically a ladder on both sides. The fence post should be longer than the others along the line as it enables one to grasp it for support while crossing. Several ladders of this kind arranged at convenient intervals will make the matter of crossing wire fences easy.

Any Kind of Fertilizer Helps.

About one-fourth of the land here is in hay meadows, of which the principal grass is timothy. These meadows are occasionally plowed up and reseeded with timothy and clover. Not much fertilizer is used, but the meadows are productive in most cases. These meadows are pastured with cattle after the hay crop is cut. Nearly all of our meadows are well drained, as they must be to get good results. Two of the most important things in the cutting of our hay crops, is to have the meadows thoroughly drained and to have them well fertilized with fertilizer of any kind.

Noted Prisoners Free.

Gov. Willson pardoned Caleb Powers of Knox county, and Jim Howard, of Clay county, Saturday morning. Howard was serving a life sentence in the penitentiary for firing the shot that killed Gov. Wm. Goebel in the state house yard on the morning of Jan. 30, 1900. Powers was in jail at Georgetown awaiting his fifth trial for complicity in the murder of Gov. Goebel.

The pardons of both men were unconditional. Powers was indicted last year in the Franklin circuit court for securing perjured testimony. Gov. Willson also pardoned him for this alleged offense.

Gov. Willson was asked what he intended to do about the indictments pending against Wm. S. Taylor, Chas. Finley and others. He replied that those cases had not been submitted to him and that he could not act on them until the applications had been made.

"What is the feeling boys?" asked the governor when he was approached by the newspaper men and asked about the Taylor and Finley cases. When told that some were glad and some were mad, he said he thought that was the way it would be.

The only person now in prison for the murder of Goebel is Henry Youtsey. Shortly after the pardons were granted, Youtsey was seen at the prison and asked what he thought. "Well," said Youtsey, "there are lots of men in this place that should have been turned out before those men, but I am glad to see anybody get out of the penitentiary. If Gov. Willson has pardoned Powers and Howard because he thinks they are innocent men, then I tell you he has made the mistake of his life, for Jim Howard is the man who fired the shot that killed Goebel, and Powers is one of the men that helped plan it."

"I believe that Willson has been compelled to pardon these men by the Republican members of the legislature, through their threats that they would not support his bills and measures unless he did pardon them. When Powers and I were in jail at Louisville and the Republican members of the legislature came to see him the race was on between Beckham and Yerkes, and I heard every one of them say to Powers: 'Yerkes has got to pardon you. Do you think that we would vote for him or work for him in any way if we knew that he would not pardon you.'

"I think that Willson has had the same understanding with the Republican members of the legislature."

Youtsey was then asked point blank if he fired the shot that killed Goebel, and he replied: "No, but at the time I would have done it if the other man had not been there to do it. To tell the truth, I don't believe that there was hardly a man in the place that would have not done it, for they felt like they would be protected by the 'mountain army' and troops and we were all worked up to such a pitch that any of us would have undertaken the job."

"As far as Powers' guilt is concerned, I tell you that he and Taylor were among those who planned the murder of Goebel, and Gov. Willson has made a mistake in not letting Powers go to the penitentiary and suffer like the rest of us. It makes me tired to hear people say that Powers did not know anything about it, when he and I talked about how the killing was to be done on the Monday before it took place, and I told him then that he had better leave the city to avoid suspicion."

It will be remembered that a petition was recently circulated in Hickman for pardon of Powers, and was signed by hundreds of our citizens. His freedom will be magnified in various phases, and his innocence and guilt equally questioned. Eight years in the shadow of the gallows has fostered for him sympathy—change in political affairs wrought his prestige.

The question is, is he guilty? The fact is, he is free.

Sixtieth Congress Ends First Session

WASHINGTON.—With the passing of an emergency currency measure and a few remaining appropriations, the first session of the Sixtieth congress has passed into history.

What Speaker Cannon calls "the mill" was well nigh choked with would-be legislation that was crammed into the hopper during the session. There have been bills of all varieties, shades and sizes. Bills for the regulation of nearly everything under the sun have been introduced. Notwithstanding the diminishing revenues and the warnings that the treasury was facing an almost certain deficit there was no abatement of the clamor for appropriations. If all the appropriations asked for had been granted the government debt would be multiplied tenfold. "If we had put through one-third of the bills that were offered us," said a prominent member of the house, "more than a century would be required to straighten out the conglomerate mass."

All records were broken by the number of bills introduced during the session. Senators and representatives came to Washington last fall with their grips full of bills, and between 5,000 and 6,000 were introduced the first day. Among them were several dozen currency bills, for in the early days of the sessions nearly every legislator had a panacea for the country's financial ills. The more the members studied the question the less they seemed to understand it and in the closing weeks few of them would admit to expert knowledge of the subject.

The rush of bills kept up all winter, the total number presented in the two branches of congress being 29,215. The house members introduced 22,035 and the senators 7,180. A great many of these measures were private pension bills, only a small percentage of which finally became laws. During the first session of the Fifty-ninth congress, which continued five weeks longer than the recent session, 9,518 bills were introduced in the house and 6,556 in the senate.

All previous records were broken by the senate in the amount of executive business which was transacted. Thirty-four treaties were ratified and made public, most of them arbitration treaties. The Congressional Record will disclose that fewer speeches were made than in times gone by owing to the fact that John Sharp Williams inaugurated a filibuster several months ago. Instead of speeches the record is filled with roll calls. About 45 minutes are required to call and verify the roll of the house. There were over 200 roll calls, most of them on inconsequential questions like adjournment, recess, approval of the journal, etc., so that the net results of Mr. Williams' dilatory campaign was that approximately six days of 24 hours each were wasted.

Bryce Interfered with Tennis Cabinet

THE entire diplomatic corps is chuckling over the way Ambassador Bryce, of Great Britain, unwittingly interfered the other afternoon with a specially called session of the tennis cabinet, to the discomfiture of President Roosevelt and his fellow ambassador, M. Jusserand, of France. The president had summoned the racquet wielders for 4:30 p.m. on the White House courts. Jusserand and Assistant Atty.-Gen. Cooley responded promptly.

Assistant Secretary of State Bacon was the only member who failed to answer the call. He had just started from his office at 4:26 for the scene when Ambassador Bryce appeared at the state department. He had come to discuss one of the pending treaties. Secretary Root at once sent for his assistant and caught him just as he was leaving the building. Excuses were telephoned the president, who, it is said, is far less apt to look with leniency on absence from the tennis cabinet than he is on failure to appear at the regular councils in the cabinet room. He wished to know why. It was explained that Mr. Bryce had come to take up an important matter, and that Mr. Bacon's presence at the department was necessary.

Under the circumstances he had to let Bacon off. A hurry call was sent for Secretary Garfield to make up the set. He could not be found for some time, so until he reported a three-handed game was played, Jusserand and Cooley easily making their victim.

When Bryce was informed of the matter he expressed deep regret, saying that his interference with the game was entirely unintentional and had he suspected such an unhappy outcome of his visit he would have delayed the diplomatic interests of his country for a few hours. He laughingly voiced the hope that there would be no serious entanglement between Great Britain and France on account of the episode.

Heir to Mexican Throne Becomes a Monk

PRINCE AUGUSTINE DE ITURBIDE, grandson of the great liberator of Mexico, heir to a throne, man of the world, highly educated, widely traveled, and a member of the jeunesse dorée of many European capitals, has forsaken the ways of the fashionable world and joined the Third Order of St. Francis.

Interwoven with his life is the romantic history of the Land of the Cactus for the last hundred years, and the melancholy fate of the Austrian archduke, Maximilian. By right of descent from the Emperor Iturbide, as well as from the fact that he was declared heir by Maximilian, Prince Iturbide would be entitled to the throne of Mexico were that country again to become an empire.

The Emperor Iturbide was born in 1782, led the revolt of the colonies, then known as New Spain, against the mother country. This war began in 1821, and lasted seven months, ending in the success of the colonies, the leader of the army, Iturbide, becoming emperor. This state of affairs was concluded in about a year by the abdication of the emperor, who sailed for Europe, in which country he made his home for some time.

Hearing that his native land was to be made the object of attack by the European powers, he returned to Mexico only to find that the republic which had existed during his absence had made a law that his life should be forfeited should he again set foot on Mexican soil.

This was in 1824. The family of the emperor came to this country, settling in Washington and Philadelphia.

In Washington fashionable society Prince Iturbide was prominent for many years. Suffering recently from severe illness, he has of late spent many months in the hospital. Prince Iturbide now asserts that he has renounced all political ambition, and that he will never make any attempt to regain his claims in Mexico.

Early Available Coal to Last 150 Years

CLOSE investigation of the coal resources of the United States, made at the direction of President Roosevelt by the geological survey, has resulted in a probably accurate summarization of the fuel resources of the country. This has been portrayed in a special map prepared by the survey, which is the greatest map-making bureau in the world.

As shown by the new coal map, there are about 327,000 square miles of what may be termed the more easily mined coal fields, with an estimated content available for future use of nearly two thousand billion tons. With the maintenance of the rate of increase of coal consumption that has held for the last 50 years the supply of early available coal will, according to the director of the geological survey, George Otis Smith, be exhausted before the middle of the next century.

An interesting feature of the coal map is the large extent of western areas portrayed as lignite—probably one-fifth of the total coal-bearing area of the country. This is a low-grade coal until recently disregarded as a factor in the consideration of the nation's fuel resources. Gasproducer tests of this coal made at St. Louis, however, have demonstrated its high fuel value, bringing it into favorable comparison for industrial purposes with the best eastern coals used in steam boilers.

FROM SMALL TOWNS

HUNDREDS OF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS TAKEN ANNUALLY.

THROUGH MAIL-ORDER SYSTEM

Views of a Banker on the Situation During the Recent Monetary Stringency Well Worthy of Consideration.

The president of a bank at Minneapolis, during the recent financial stringency, called attention to one source of financial drain upon the country towns which should be taken into consideration, and a remedy applied.

"In this remarkable situation," he said, "when everybody is prosperous and there is not enough currency to go round, it is important that every dollar possible should be kept at home until the banking business is again on a cash basis. In the cities this is being done with a good deal of success, and the clearing-house certificates and cashier's checks prevent a serious embarrassment. But out in the country, where there are no clearing houses, every dollar hoarded or sent away from home counts double.

"At this time the patronage of the foreign catalogue houses is a factor that ought to be considered seriously. By their own reports two of these catalogue houses, which deal in almost every commodity of use to the home or farm, do a business of $90,000,000 a year. This is $300,000 for each of the six business days of the week. This money comes largely out of the country towns. These catalogue houses do not sell to people in the cities where they are located. It is from the farmers and residents of towns of less than 5,000 population that 95 per cent. of their business comes and at least a third of it is from the northwest. And remember, too, that there are other catalogue houses, and that the combined business done by them is at least $200,000,000 annually.

"I am informed that all through the state of Minnesota this competition of the foreign catalogue houses has been very seriously felt by the merchants of small towns, to such an extent that some have been driven out of business entirely.

"If this has been the case during the great prosperity of recent years, when money was circulated freely, what must the effect be now when the currency is needed at home? Money spent with the local merchant is disbursed in the locality, at least the profits of his business are, but money sent away is lost from local circulation.

"Without going into the home-trade question it seems plain to me that those who buy from a foreign catalogue house at this time are directly injuring themselves, for this question of keeping money in home circulation involves people of all conditions."

Ideas for Market Days.

That the "market day" idea is becoming decidedly popular in the country is indicated by the fact that the merchants of dozens of western towns have adopted the plan lately. Reports from these places, which have been giving the "market day" plan a trial, indicate that it is giving satisfaction to dealers and to their patrons. Like any other innovation the success of the establishment of a market day depends almost entirely upon the interest which it evokes and the sustained energy that is employed in giving it a distinctive value to producers. The merchants will get out of the plan no more nor less than they put into it. If the arrangements made afford the assurance that patrons will find improved facilities for the disposal of their products it is certain to prove a drawing feature. If it is employed simply as a plan for drawing a crowd of farmers to town to spend their money, it is equally certain that the ultimate result will be unsatisfactory, if not seriously detrimental to future business relations. It is good policy not to go into a scheme of this kind until satisfied that conditions are right for its success, and once undertaken, to push it for all it is worth. Make it worth while for customers to come from a distance for the day, so that they will be ready to assist in the perpetuation of the plan. A great deal depends on "starting right" and, once having popularized the idea to keep up sustained enthusiasm by providing improved facilities for caring for the increased trade which it develops.

Manners.—Manners are not like clothes. It's a bad thing to have two suits of them—one for best and one for everyday. Wear your best manners all the time. They suffer more by being put away than by constant use. If you keep your best manners for company they will fit you ill, and your visitor will suspect they were put on for him. Second best clothes may be worn at home, but not second best manners. To whom is it worth while to be courteous if not to the people you love best?—Home Chat.

Immense Food Receipts.—At a recent municipal celebration in Covina, Cal., in which a barbecue was given to mark the advent of an electric railway, coffee was served from an urn holding 250 gallons, or 5,000 cups; beans were cooked in a pot holding 200 gallons.

Heavy Imports of Foodstuffs.—In 1906 the imports of wheat and wheat flour into the United Kingdom were 78 per cent. of the total supply. In 1905 the imports were 35 per cent. and in France three per cent. In the United Kingdom in 1906 the imported supplies of meat were 47 per cent.

LEARNED A LESSON.

One Farmer Finds Out Something Through Buying a Mail-Order Stove.

The Wayne (Neb.) Herald relates the story of a Wayne county farmer who was caught by one of the catalogue houses. He learned the lesson and paid dearly for it. Mr. Farmer had seen the stove picture in the catalogue and had sent on his good $29, adding $2.00 for freight. Then the stove came to the depot. The farmer came to town, loaded up the junk and drove up onto the business street. Then to some friends, he confided:

"That stove cost me $29 and $2.00 freight, and I'll bet it is half sheet iron. I have been waiting for it for over two months and my wife is nearly crazy about it. I could have done better by buying of the Wayne hardware dealers. The catalogue fellows can go to hades in the future."

This is a lesson that people of Nebraska and other states are being taught every day in the year and it is a pleasure to know that they are getting their eye teeth cut in the most artistic and approved style. They are ordering from the catalogues and in return they are getting a miserable lot of junk, paying much higher prices than they would have to pay for first-class goods sold in the home stores.

The catalogue houses live and grow fat off just such people as the man at Wayne. These men are constantly looking for the big end of the bargain. The catalogue houses are doing the same thing. It would look as though it would be "When Greek meets Greek," but it's nothing of the kind. The catalogue concerns have all the advantage. They have gotten the money of the individual and then they send him out any kind of an old lot of junk, knowing that he has no recourse. These catalogue houses have been doing this thing for years and find plenty of suckers, for you know there is something recorded about a sucker being born every second. Perhaps they do not get the same sucker a second time, but they catch some that came along in the new crop.

HANDLING FARM PRODUCTS.

Improved Methods Practiced in Many Agricultural Towns.

Every farming community turns trade to the town where best prices are paid for the minor products which the farmers have to dispose of. The prices paid for butter and eggs, quite often, decide the business life of a town. The general practice in many places is for individual merchants to take produce in exchange for goods. The lowest market price is the rule in these towns. Should one merchant pay a cent a pound more for butter, or a cent more a dozen for eggs, the farmers conclude that the difference is made up in the quality of goods or the quantity they receive in exchange.

To overcome the annoyances occasioned through unwholesome competition in the buying of farmers' products, the business men of many agricultural towns, during the past few years, have undertaken the operation of co-operative produce establishments. These establishments generally consist of a commodious warehouse with cold storage appliances. The merchants of the town are the stockholders in the concern. A manager is employed on salary and is intrusted with the buying and marketing of all produce. The storekeepers refer all farmers who have produce for sale to the produce house and the highest market price is paid and due bills given which are payable in goods at the stores in the town.

This method has proved highly satisfactory everywhere it has been tried. Not alone have the merchants found it advantageous, but the farmers as well. Another feature worth consideration is the fact that farmers are not compelled to trade at any particular store, but can make their purchases in any store in the town. Then again much trade is saved to the community that might go to the mail-order houses of the larger cities.

During the Summer Months.

The summer time is the time the retail merchant must keep things moving at a lively pace in his store. Generally the warm weather season is dull with retailers and the period from June to September is generally regarded as a time when there is little doing.

Here is where the retail merchant must not allow himself to take a wrong view of things. The fact that this stretch of three months has been generally regarded as a period of inactivity is just the very reason why he cannot afford to allow it to be one. There can be no periods of inactivity for the merchant of to-day. He must keep a full head of steam up all the time, and it is even more important that he should do this on the up grade, when he is working against the forces of gravitation than on the level, when the business rushes almost of its own momentum.

The live merchant will make up his mind that there will be no periods of inactivity in his store. He keeps things moving all the time; there is something doing every day and he doesn't give people a chance to forget for a single day that he is selling the best merchandise at the lowest possible prices.

It is these periods of inactivity on the parts of retail merchants which have given the retail mail order houses their opportunity to make inroads on their trade. With the mail order houses there are no periods of inactivity, and during the summer months they will hustle harder than ever for trade, because they "need the money." The retail merchant must prepare to meet aggressive competition on the part of the catalogue merchants and it is up to him to hustle and see well to his local advertising.

UNUSUALLY BRILLIANT.

GIRL AND HUSBAND RIDE BLIND BAGGAGE

FORMER, DRESSED AS A MAN, TRAVELS WITH HUSBAND IN UNUSUAL MANNER.

Indianapolis, Ind.—"Please let him finish cutting my hair, it looks horrible."

This was what bicyclists Wilson and Gollisch heard when they looked into a car in the yards of a lumber company. Sitting on a pile of lumber in the car were a young man and a young woman. And—horror!—the young woman was arrayed in boy's clothing. She had a pretty face in spite of the accumulation of dirt that had settled during a night's ride on a train.

The young man and woman made haste to explain that they were "beating" their way from Cleveland, O.

I was completely worn out and discouraged when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they went right to the cause of the trouble and did their work well. I have been feeling well ever since."

DAD AND HIS MEMORY.

Old Gentleman Really Had Very Little to Brag About.

It was a severe trial to Mr. Harding that his only son's memory was not all that could be desired. "Where in the world he got such a forgetful streak from is beyond me," said the exasperated father to his wife on one occasion.

"What has he forgotten now?" asked Mrs. Harding, with eyes downcast and a demure expression.

"The figures of the last return from the election on the bulletin-board," and Mr. Harding inserted a finger in his collar as if to loosen it, and shook his head vehemently. "Looked at 'em as he came past not half an hour ago, and now can't tell me."

"As I said to him: 'If you're so stupid you can't keep a few simple figures in your head, why don't you write 'em down on a piece of paper, as I do, and have done all my life, long before I was your age?' Youth's Companion.

FAMILIAR PHRASE.

Getting a bear living.

An Occasion for Rejoicing.

Recently the usual morning exercises of a school were interrupted by a knock at the door. After reading a note which had been handed in, the principal announced that one of the teachers would be unable to be at school for several days, owing to a slight illness. Immediately two boys began to whisper. Upon asking what the trouble was, the boys said they were only talking about the selection of a hymn.

"And what would you like to sing?" said the teacher.

"Count Your Blessings," was the quick response.

Useless Society.

Mrs. Jones often declared that she enjoyed a little chat with their fish-dealer because he was a man of such original ideas, but one day, says London Opinion, she returned from market somewhat puzzled by his remarks.

"I said to him, just in the way of conversation," declared Mrs. Jones, "that I had heard that a man becomes like that with which he most associates."

"That's ridiculous, Mrs. Jones!" he answered. "I've been a fishmonger all my life and can't swim a yard."

Using the Telephone.

It was the first time she had ever used a telephone and the drug clerk detected the fact by the nervous way in which she held the receiver.

"Dear me," she exclaimed, timidly, "why are all those sievelike holes in the mouthpiece?"

"They are there for a purpose," replied the drug clerk, solemnly.

"What purpose?"

"Why, so you can strain your voice."

And she was so embarrassed she forgot the number she was to call up.

Right Food Gives Strength and Brain Power.

The natural elements of wheat and barley, including the phosphate of potassium, are found in Grape-Nuts, and that is why persons who are run down from improper food pick up rapidly on Grape-Nuts.

"My system was run down by excessive night work," writes a N. Y. man, "in spite of a liberal supply of ordinary food."

"After using Grape-Nuts I noticed improvement at once, in strength, and nerve and brain power."

"This food seemed to lift me up and stay with me for better exertion, with less fatigue. My weight increased 20 lbs. with vigor and comfort in proportion."

"When traveling I always carry the food with me to insure having it."

Curious Indian Custom.

The following curious custom is recorded by J. Owen Dorsey in his monograph on the sociology of the Omaha Indians:

"In the spring when the grass comes up there is a council or tribal assembly held to which a feast is given by the head of the Hanga geno. After they decide that planting time has come and at command of the Hanga man a crier is sent through the villages. He wears a robe with hair outside and cries as he goes. 'They do, indeed, say that you will dig the ground!' Hallo!" He carries sacred corn, which has been shelled and to each household he gives two or three grains, which are mixed with the seed of the household."

After this it is lawful for the people to dig up the soil and plant their crops.

If you have nice beautiful yards, allow your boys to play in them, never scolding them for their merry laughter, for 'tis better far to be annoyed at home than to have them mixed up in an ugly affair on the street of which you know nothing until it has grown cold and on every one's tongue.

COURTESY AT HOME.

Good breeding, like charity should begin at home. The day is past when children used to rise when their parents entered the room where they were and stand until they had received permission to sit. But the mistake is now made usually in the other direction in allowing too small boys and girls too much license to disturb the peace of the household. We think the best way to train children in courtesy would be to observe towards them a scrupulous politeness. We would go so far as to say that we should make it as much a point to listen to children without interrupting them and to answer them sincerely and respectfully as if they were grown up. And indeed, many of their wise, quaint sayings are far better worth listening to than the stereotyped commonplaces of the morning callers. Of course, to allow uninterrupted chatter would be to surrender the repose of the household, but it is very easy, if children are themselves scrupulously respected, to teach them in turn to respect the convenience of others, and to know when to talk and when to be silent.

If a child is brought up in the constant exercise of courtesy toward brothers and sisters and playmates, as well as toward parents and uncles and aunts, it will have little left to learn as it grows older.

The best brought up family of children we ever knew were educated on the principle of always competitively, not on weak heart in the self, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny nerve that is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the cardiac, or Heart Nerve—implies needs, and must have, more power, more stability, commanding, more governing strength. Without that the heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative—nothing more, nothing less, nothing—but in the past done so much for the sick and failing heart. Dr. Shoop directs that the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress—Dr. Shoop's Restorative—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. mending them when it was possible to do so, and letting silence be the reproof of any wrong doing which was not really serious. We have heard the children of the household when their mother had failed to say any word of commendation after some social occasion, ask as anxiously as possible, "What was it, mama? I know something was wrong. Didn't we treat the other children well, or were we too noisy?" In that house reproof was never bestowed unsought—only commendation of whatever it was possible to commend, was gratuitous.

We think this system would be as good for those grown-up children, the husbands and wives, as for those still in the nursery.

IF I ONLY HAD CAPITAL.

The above words were recently uttered in our hearing by a worthy boy and undoubtedly they are often reiterated by many who are out of employment, or have little or nothing to do. To all such we say, you have home capital, you have hands, feet, bones, muscle, health, and are not these capital? What more capital has God given anybody? "But if I only had a few thousand in cash capital" says the young man. But these are better than cash capital, for no one can take them from you and with these you can earn cash.

Our men of wealth and influence did not start with any cash capital. They went to work with their plow, the hoe, the jack plane or axe, and in time their capital brought them rich harvest. Ah! but there's the rub; you don't want to work. You want money on credit so you can play the gentleman, speculate and end your career by playing vagabond. You want to marry a rich girl who will support you, while you wear fine clothes, smoke cigars, and be a gentleman of leisure.

Shame on you, young man! Go to work with the capital you have and you will soon make interest enough upon it to give you as much money as you need. If you cannot make money upon what capital you have, you could not if you had a larger amount in cash. If you waste your present capital you would waste money if you had it. So don't stand around, a helpless fellow, waiting for something to turn up, but go to work. Take the first work you can get to do and do it well. Always do your best, and if you manage your capital that God has given you well, you will soon have plenty more to manage.

IS LIFE WORTH LIVING?

When you hear this question asked by a man or woman, with lips curved downward and voice attuned to discontent, you may set that person down as supremely selfish. He or she asks practically, "Is life worth living for me?" Worth living? Of course it is, so long as there is one single other soul in the world. If the querist were the last of his race, then indeed the answer might well be "No;" but while there is another human being for whom we can do a favor, or whose interests we may advance, life is indeed "worth living."

FRIENDS, when you find yourself depressed and inclined to think that life holds nothing for you, look around you (not very far away), and do the very first favor for another that comes to your head. It may be a very small one, but do it: and keep on, day by day, hour by hour and minute by minute, working for others, for truly this alone makes life worth living.

For cuts, sprains, bruises burns, rheumatic and all other pains, use McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment. First sold in 1825, still the same effective remedy in 1908. Good for man or beast. 25c, 50c and $1.00.

Will of Insane Man.

Justice Walter Lloyd Smith, who presides over the third department of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, brought with him to the recent dinner of the New York University Law School Alumni Association what he said was the most remarkable document that ever came into his possession. Others who read the document, the last will and testament of Charles Lounsbury, who died in the Cook County Asylum at Dunning, Ill., were disposed to agree with him. Here it is:

"I, Charles Lounsbury, being of sound mind and disposing memory, do hereby make and publish this my last will and testament, in order as justly as may be to distribute my interest in the world among succeeding men.

"That part of my interest which is known in law and recognized in the sheep-bound volumes as my property, being inconsiderable and of no account, I make no disposal of in this my will.

"My right to live, being but a life estate, is not at my disposal, but these things excepted all else in the world I now proceed to devise and bequeath.

"Item: I give to good fathers and mothers in trust for their children, all good little words of praise and encouragement, and all quaint pet names and endearments, and I charge said parents to use them justly and generously, as the needs of their children may require.

"Item: I leave to children inclusively, but only for the term of their childhood, all and every, the flowers of the fields and the blossoms of the woods, with the right to play among them freely according to the customs of children, warning them at the same time against thistles and thorns. And I devise to children the banks of brooks, and the golden sands beneath the waters thereof, and the odor of the willows that dip therein and the white clouds that float high over the giant trees. And I leave the children the long, long days to be merry in, a thousand ways, and the night and the moon and the train of the Milky Way to wonder at, but subject nevertheless to the rights hereinafter given to lovers.

"Item: I devise to boys jointly all the useful idle fields and commons where ball may be played, all pleasant waters where one may swim; all snow-clad hills where one may coast and all streams and ponds where one may fish, or where, when grim Winter comes, one may skate; to have and to hold the same for the period of their boyhood. And all meadows with the clover blossoms and butterflies thereof, the woods and their appurtenances, the squirrels and birds, and echoes and strange noises, and all distant places which may be visited, together with the adventures there found, and I give to said boys each his own place at the fireside at night, with all pictures that may be seen in the burning wood, to enjoy without let or hindrance, and without any incumbrance or care.

"Item: To lovers, I devise their imaginary world, with whatever they may need, as the stars of the sky, the red roses by the wall, the bloom of the hawthorn, the sweet strains of music, and aught else by which they may desire to figure to each other the lastingness and beauty of their love.

"Item: To our loved ones with snowy crowns I bequeath the happiness of old age, the love and gratitude of their children, until they fall asleep."

If one feels dull and spiritless, in the spring or early summer, they call it "Spring Fever." But there is no fever—usually. It is the after effect of our winter habits. The nerves are mostly at fault. Tired, worn-out nerves leaves us languid, lifeless, and without spirit or ambition. A few doses of Dr. Shoop's Restorative will absolutely and quickly change all of these depressing symptoms. The Restorative of course won't bring you back to full health in a day or two, but it will do enough in 48 hours to satisfy you that the remedy is reaching that "tired spot." Druggists everywhere are advising its use as a splendid and prompt general tonic. It gives more vim and more spirit to the spoonful than any other known nerve or constitutional tonic. It sharpens a failing appetite, aids digestion, frees sluggish livers and kidneys, and brings new life, strength and ambition. Test it a few days and be convinced.

Bad Backache

Such agonies as some women suffer, every month, from backache!

Is it necessary? No. It can be prevented and relieved, when caused by female trouble, by taking a medicine with specific, curative action, on the female organs and functions, which acts by relieving the congestion, stopping the pain and building the organs and functions up to a proper state of health. Try.

WINE OF CARDUI

WOMAN'S RELIEF

"I suffered for 15 years," writes Mrs. Malinda A. Akers, of Basham, Va., "with various female troubles. I had such a backache that it drew me over, so I could not stand straight. The doctors could not help me, so I took Cardui, and now I feel like a new woman."

Democracy of Kentucky, in convention assembled at Lexington, June 11, 1908 reaffirm our allegiance and devotion to the principles of the Democratic party as represented by Jefferson and advocated by a long line of illustrious leaders, and a set forth in the national Democratic platform in 1904.

We endorse and point with satisfaction to the wise, honest and economical conduct of the state government by the Democratic administration of Gov. J. C. W. Beckham and his associates in office.

We disapprove and condemn the weak, vacillating, hypocritical and arbitrary conduct of our state affairs by the present Republican administration.

We instruct the delegates elect by this convention to cast the vote of Kentucky as a unit upon all national and matters coming before the national Democratic convention to be held at Denver, Col., July 1, 1908, and they are hereby further instructed to vote for William J. Bryan as the nominee for
